

How a Toilet Plunger Improved CPR

The conventional method for chest compressions doesn't have a great success rate. Doctors are pumping it up with a high-tech plunger.

 Give this article

By Joanne Silberner

June 15, 2023, 9:55 a.m. ET

Cardiac arrest patients who received neuroprotective CPR within 11 minutes of a call to 911 were about three times more likely to survive with good brain function than were those who received conventional CPR. AdvancedCPR Solutions